RESEARCH GRANTS

National Science Foundation Law & Social Sciences Program. Awarded $400,000 to conduct a study of coerced debt, with Adrienne Adams and Angie Kennedy, Michigan State University. This project will be the first in-depth study of coerced debt. It will address fundamental questions about how coerced debt operates in abusive relationships, how victims seek and attain legal help for coerced debt, and coerced debt's effects on women's recovery from an abusive relationship. This study will use a sequential mixed-method longitudinal design to collect data from a sample of women recently divorced from an abusive partner. The researchers will use public divorce records to recruit a sample of 180 women Texas (120 women with coerced debt and a comparison group of 60 without). The researchers will collect quantitative data through in-person interviews with the full sample and qualitative follow-up interviews with a smaller subset of women with coerced debt. The research will run from September 2019 to August 2022.

National Conference of Bankruptcy Judges Education Endowment. Awarded $9,255 to conduct a study of consumers being sued by debt collectors, with Pamela Foohey at Indiana University Maurer School of Law. The goal is to survey them about their understanding of and feelings about bankruptcy in order to understand whether they have the knowledge to file for bankruptcy strategically and the extent to which they consider bankruptcy stigmatizing.

GRANTS and EMPIRICAL RESEARCH

Co-Principal Investigator, Debt as a Control Tactic in Abusive Marriages 2019-2022

- We received $400,000 of funding from the NSF in the fall of 2019.
- The quantitative data will be used to investigate: 1) the types and amounts of coerced debt incurred in victims' names, tactics abuser use to incur it, and how victims learn of fraud; 2) differences between abusive relationships with and without coerced debt; 3) the extent to which help for coerced debt is available, accessible, and acceptable through divorce and debtor-creditor law; and 4) the extent of coerced debt's economic effects in the three months after an abusive relationship ends. Additionally, the researchers will conduct in-depth follow-up qualitative interviews with a subsample of up to 40 victims of coerced debt. The qualitative data will be used to gain a deeper, more nuanced understanding of how victims of coerced debt experience it in the broader context of abuse, facilitators of and barriers to attaining help through the divorce system, and the process by which coerced debt shapes victims' lives. In addition to publishing scholarship, the researchers will disseminate the findings to policy makers, service providers, and attorneys with the goal of ensuring that interventions to address coerced debt are evidence-based

Principal Investigator, Credit Abuse Project 2010-2011

Designed and implemented a preliminary, qualitative study in which I interviewed fifty-five professionals in the domestic violence field about the credit problems experienced by their clients. Resulted in the discovery of coerced debt, a phenomenon in which batterers in abusive relationships steal their victims' credit through fraud and coercion.

Co-Principal Investigator, Consumer Bankruptcy Project, IV 2006-2010

The Consumer Bankruptcy Project (CBP) has been the leading national survey on consumer bankruptcy for the past thirty years. The project has produced nationally recognized models of family financial insecurity and has resulted in the publication of four books and more than three dozen articles.

Principal Investigator, Domestic Violence Project, a sub-project of the CBP. Worked with a psychologist consultant to develop an interview protocol to assess rates of domestic violence among women in bankruptcy. Organized and supervised data collection and data coding. Analyzed quantitative data to find that female victims and survivors of domestic violence are overrepresented in bankruptcy as compared to the general U.S. population.

Co-Principal Investigator, Consumer Bankruptcy Project, IV. With other co-PIs, conducted a national, randomized survey of consumers who filed bankruptcy in February and March of 2007.

- The research consisted of three major components: (1) a written questionnaire (n=2521, response rate=50.7%); (2) a follow-up telephone interview modules (n=1032, response rate=40.9% of survey participants); (3) coding of bankruptcy court records (n=2621, which included all survey participants and 100 non-responders as a response-bias check)
- Co-PIs: David U. Himmelstein, Associate Professor of Medicine, Harvard Medical School; Melissa B. Jacoby, Graham Kenan Professor of Law, University of North Carolina School of Law; Robert M. Lawless, Professor, University of Illinois College of Law; Katherine M. Porter, Professor, University of California, Irvine, College of Law; John A. E. Pottow, Professor, University of Michigan Law School; Teresa A. Sullivan, now President, University of Virginia; Deborah K. Thorne, Professor, Ohio University, Department of Sociology & Anthropology; Elizabeth Warren, then Leo Gottlieb Professor of Law, Harvard Law School; Steffie Woolhandler, Associate Professor of Medicine, Harvard Medical School.
- Funders included the American Association of Retired Persons, the Robert Wood Johnson, the Harvard Law School, the University of Michigan Office of Vice President for Research, and the University of Michigan Law School.

Principal Investigator, Credit Usage Study 2005-2007
 Designed and implemented a qualitative and quantitative research project studying low-income women's experiences with credit cards. Developed interview protocol and interviewed fifty-two low-income women in the Boston area. Created coding manual and supervised three law student and eight undergraduate coders. Analyzed data using qualitative content-analysis methods.
